Environmental

The Center for Public Integrity (the Center) obtained a copy and was the first to publish excerpts of an exhaustive federal study of environmental hazards in the Great Lakes states that top officials had kept under wraps. Within weeks of its publication, Congress opened an investigation in the Center for Disease Control's withholding of this important study.

Using the Freedom of Information Acts, the Center obtained the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) internal pesticide incident-reporting database. Its review of 10 years worth of adverse-reaction reports filed by pesticide manufacturers found that

International Consortium of Investigative Journalists (ICIJ)

Many of society's most pressing contemporary issues cannot be broached without addressing their global dimensions and context. Launched in 1997, ICIJ marshals the talents of some of the world's leading investigative reporters. With core staff based in Washington, DC, ICIJ works with 100 reporters in 50 countries to produce the kind of long-term, transnational projects that few media outlets will take on today.

In 2008, ICIJ returned to its landmark investigation of global cigarette smuggling, which forced far-reaching changes on the tobacco industry. The Center's new project has already sparked worldwide

Money and Politics

The roots of the Center's no-stone-unturned approach reach deep into the relationship between money and politics in the United States.

The Buying of the President 2008: A team of journalists and researchers followed the money and its influence in the nation's most expensive presidential campaign in history. The project's website has become a key repository for vital information, including more than 100 in-depth interviews with current and former presidential candidates, political strategists, campaign donors, and other experts.

pyrethrins and pyrethroids, used in thousands of supposedly "safer" pesticides, accounted for more than 26 percent of all fatal, "major" and "moderate" human incidents reported to the EPA in 2007, a 300 percent increase in the last decade. The Center's study prompted the EPA's director of pesticide programs to consider placing new restrictions on the use of certain pesticides. It also pushed the agency to review its pesticide monitoring system in 2008 and modernize collection of data in 2009.

Most people know that mining coal is a dirty business. The Center reported that the reality of the industry that supplies half of America's power falls far short of its "clean coal" public relations campaign. In an extensive report, the Center exposed the unintended consequences of "longwall mining," said to be a superior way to extract coal than removing entire mountaintops. The story featured farmers and others who have found their land's springs and streams gone, presumably swallowed by gaping tunnels burrowed beneath their land. This report was particularly useful to the environmental law community and other environmental groups who work on the issue of clean coal and climate change.

Formerly the ICIJ award, this biennial prize, recognized outstanding global investigative reporting. In 2008, the prize was renamed for Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl, who was slain by militants while investigating al Qaeda in Pakistan in 2002. The competition attracted an impressive 86 entries from 24 countries, involving reporting in more than 60 countries during 2006 and 2007. A panel of five international judges selected seven entries as finalists.

its Pushing Prescriptions project in June 2008, providing a fresh data update and analysis on the pharmaceutical industry's lobbying activities, expenditures, and successes during 2007. In particular, the report looked at the targets of industry lobbying and dollars, and the course corrections wrought by the arrival of the new Democratic Congress.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4d, Other Program Services:
Communications
The Center's communication program includes media, public relations, outreach, and the Center's award-winning Web site.
Expenses $473,073. including grants of $0. Revenue $0.

Research and Development
The Center's signature project, the "Broken Government" project was released during 2008. The project was a Center-wide effort to analyze and catalogue the top failures in government during the last eight years.
years. Utilizing the input of more than a hundred experts, congressional staffers, and leaders of government watchdog organizations, the Center sought to develop an agency-by-agency picture of the ways that government has failed in its mission to serve the American people, whether by cronyism, inefficiency, or explicit policy design. The Center identified more than 125 systemic failures that took place across the breadth of the federal government during the tenure of the Bush administration.

Expenses $363386. including grants of $0. Revenue $0.

Legacy of War

The Center's "Iraq: The War Card" project documented the Bush administration's orchestrated deceptions on the path to the Iraq War. The project revealed that the Bush administration made numerous false statements regarding the national security threat posed by Iraq. This effectively stirred up public opinion and led the nation to war under false pretenses.

Expenses $136007. including grants of $0. Revenue $0.

Social issues

The Center conducted preliminary work on Campus Assault, an investigation that looks into the adjudication of rapes on college campuses.

Expenses $32795. including grants of $0. Revenue $0.
